Eger could be described as a Baroque jewellery-box, being one of the most attracting cities of Hungary. The glory of this town once resounded all through Europe and its present appearance echoes it back for its inhabitants and visitors, as well. Eger is situated in the north-eastern part of Hungary surrounded by beautiful mountains. It is not only famous for its fiery wines and spas but also for its hospitality. These features made Eger the third most popular town among tourist coming from other parts of Hungary as well as from abroad.

The Egri Testedző Club was established in 1995. There are several Hungarian champions and members of the Hungarian National Team, which represent the high level of the orienteering job within the club. Ádám Kovács has the most outstanding result, achieving the 17th place of long distance in World Orienteering Championship in 2009. Ádám and his club mate András Szabó were members of the Hungarian relay team winning bronze medal in World University Championship in 2008. Among the women Ágnes Simon has the most valuable results winning senior ski orienteering world champion titles.
